The Yankee Dolphin is a keel centerboard masthead sloop of moderately light displacement and long waterline designed by Olin Stephens to be raced successfully under the MORC and CCA rules. The design was to provide sea kindliness and accommodations with the trend toward family participation. Savili is one of the first O'Day/Lunn built boats. She was raced successfully in eastern Long Island Sound. She is a classy classic and frequently attracts comments like, "Now, that is what a sailboat is supposed to look like."
